

Standup 13: Limitations and Challenges

This week involved reflecting on project limitations. Predictive models lacked full transparency, statistical assumptions were frequently violated, and key variables such as debt-to-income ratio were unavailable.

The challenge was acknowledging these constraints without undermining the value of the findings. Clear documentation helped contextualize results appropriately.

Next week, I will finalize conclusions and outline future research directions.